

Day 7

Write an argument between two characters.

Remember: arguments usually involve dialogue but also so much more. Think about space (arguments are like dances?) Power (power is expressed in multiple and subtle ways) comedy (sometimes people are ridiculous when they argue) physicality and most importantly emotion.

You can write it in any form you like, from comic domestic exchange full of subtlety and familiarity or as domestic noir. Remember nobody else will ever see it, it functions in the first instance as an exercise in emotionality, character and dialogue.
